Good staff are often promoted into leadership positions without too much thought as to their ability to lead.

The Emerging Leader's Workshop is perfect for the high performing staff member who's newly promoted.

We outline the difference between management and leadership, explain what "GOOD" leadership looks like and delve into the power of emotional control and intelligence. Your emerging leaders will leave the workshop more confident in their own ability and more effective in their new leadership position.

The workshop is tailored to your organisations' specific culture and designed to cover the psychological aspects of leadership.

Our lesson content is underpinned by leadership theory and all of our staff have academic qualifications ranging from Business Degrees to PhDs.

We pride ourselves on thinking deeply about leadership and providing theoretical solutions that can be immediately put into practice by the participants.
